

We are pleased to invite you to the official launch of

I'm Still Here

A research-based play presented on DVD about the realities of Alzheimer's disease and related dementias from the perspectives of those living with it

When: Tuesday January 16, 2007
11:30 a.m. – 2:00 p.m.

Where: Clarica Auditorium
Lyle Hallman Institute
University of Waterloo (Parking available in Lot M at Columbia Street Entrance - $4 required on entry)

Discussion and refreshments will follow the video presentation

Please extend this invitation to others who may be interested

RSVP by January 12, 2007
to fmorton@uwaterloo.ca or (519) 888-4567 ext. 36880

As a health care professional, I found this play very informative as well as entertaining. Seeing the actors go through the stages of this devastating illness was very moving, and reminded me again that the person may be losing their memories, but their feelings are still very much intact. Thanks again for this very moving performance!

Thank you, it was so well done. I have been a dementia care giver for many years, you pointed out a new way of looking at the disease, as a time of slowing down, being in the moment, accepting and letting go.

*This play provides a valuable venue for people to not only experience dementia/dementia care through the play, but also to share and hear personal experiences.
A must see!*

